

Python Food register analysis

Authors: José Luis Madrigal Sánchez

There was an excel made to have information to work with, first a graph of each biomolecule of the diverse food was shown, having things like calories, protein, carbohydrates, lipids and sodium.

There was a comparison of each biomolecule with the calories, in this case with carbohydrates.

Finally, predictions of the calories were made with a basic machine learning algorithm based on scikit learn library.

